

WE'RE CHANGING MINDS

Now Accepting Applications – UMBC Postdoctoral Fellows Program for Faculty Diversity, 2015-17 Cohort

UMBC's Postdoctoral Fellowship for Faculty Diversity is a two-year in-residence fellowship that supports promising scholars committed to diversity in the academy and prepares them for possible tenure-track appointments at University of Maryland, Baltimore County (UMBC). During the two-year appointment, UMBC provides teaching and research mentors and professional development opportunities across campus. Fellows also receive a stipend, health benefits, and additional funding for conference travel and the preparation of scholarly work, as well as office space with a computer, library, and other privileges at the university.

To apply, please visit <http://apply.interfolio.com/25252> and submit your application materials by November 14, 2014.

Dr. Rwany Sibaja

Dr. Sibaja received his Ph.D. in History at George Mason University (Fairfax, VA). His research interests focus on the cultural history of 20th-century Argentina, particularly with the role of sports in shaping notions of collective identity. Dr. Sibaja's secondary interests reside with the role of digital tools in the teaching, learning, and writing of history.

Dr. Evelyn Thomas

Dr. Thomas, an alumna of Spellman College, received her Ph.D. from Howard University in the Department of Mathematics. Her research interests lie in mathematical biology; specifically, the modeling of sexually transmitted diseases and social/sexual behavior. Her work is a mixture of analytical techniques from classical epidemiological modeling involving dynamical systems, new modeling techniques, and numerical simulations.

Dr. Kara Hunt

Dr. Hunt received her Ph.D. in Culture and Theory from the University of California, Irvine. She situates her work at the intersection of humor studies, Black studies, and visual studies. Her dissertation investigates the relationship between humor and modern conceptions of humanity in order to intervene on the criteria driving evaluations of race and gender.

Dr. Viviana MacManus

Dr. MacManus received her Ph.D. at the University of California, San Diego, in the Department of Literature. Her research interests lie in 20th-century Latin American literary and cultural studies, and critical gender studies. Dr. MacManus' work centers on transnational Latin American state violence, gender politics, the politics of memory and the politics of human rights.
