Girls' Last Tour

Girls' Last Tour is a beautifully haunting and introspective, yet fun and charming look into a desolate post-apocalyptic world. Join the two young protagonists, Chito and Yuuri, as they explore the devastated remnants of the world we once knew (one that was ruined before they could even remember) on their trusty Kettenkrad, or German tank-motorcycle. Throughout their lonely journey together, Chito and Yuuri try their best to have hope for the future, and find enjoyment and beauty in their surroundings. After all, even though the world is dark and cold, life must always carry on. This series is also boosted by an excellent soundtrack and superb artstyle.

Samurai Champloo

Magical Circle Guru Guru

Magical Circle Guru Guru is what you get when you cross JRPGs and anime. Nike and Kukuri are on an "epic adventure" to defeat the darkness. And just like JRPGs, it's mostly side quests. So plug in your Famicom controller and enjoy the fun.

Kuroko No Basket

Kuroko no Basket follows the journey of Seirin's players as they attempt to become the best Japanese high school team by winning the Interhigh. To reach their goal, they have to cross pathways with several powerful teams, some of which have one of the five players with godlike abilities, whom Kuroko and Taiga make a pact to defeat.

I normally don't like sports anime, but this anime is actually really good. The characters are funny, the games are intense, and the players are ridiculously strong. It's not your ordinary sports anime, I promise.

Utawarerumono: The False Faces

A man comes to his senses in the middle of a snowy forest, and finds that he can't remember anything. A giant centipede starts chasing him, and he gets rescued by a strong woman, who takes herself as his guardian until he can recover his memories.
